

About the Contributors

Udi Adiv, Department of Sociology & Political science, Open University, Israel

Dr. Adiv was born and brought up in Israel in a Kibbutz. Between 1970-1972 he studied at Haifa University. After a long break because of his political activity and jail, he finished his studies at the department of Sociology & Politics Birkbeck College, in 1997. Since 1998 Dr. Adiv has been teaching political theory at the Open University. eadive1@bezeqint.net

Orkideh Behrouzan, M.D., University of Oxford, Clinical Medicine Department

Dr. Behrouzan is a medical doctor. She graduated from Teheran University in 2002. She is presently completing a Science DPhil. degree at Oxford University in the UK. She has published scientific papers as well as social articles and award-winning poems and short stories. orkideh.behrouzan@spc.ox.ac.uk

Bart Bonikowski, Graduate Student, Department of Sociology, Duke University

Bonikowski's interests include social theory (particularly theories of social action), cultural sociology, and comparative/historical methods. Most of his research over the past couple of years has focused on the intensification of state and corporate surveillance practices in Canadian and American societies. Bonikowski is currently working on four projects: a study of racial profiling of Arab Americans in the aftermath of 9/11; a structural analysis of the distribution of cultural attitudes in sociodemographic space; a network analysis (with James Cook) of the gender distribution of congressional bill co-sponsorships; and a theoretical paper (with Miller McPherson) that argues for a structuralist understanding of social action. bartb@soc.duke.edu

Fouad Bouguetta, Professor, University of Anaba, Algeria

Fouad Bouguetta is associate professor of Communication, Institute of Communication, University of Annaba, Annaba, Algeria. He is also the Head of the Research Center for Entrepreneurship at the University of Annaba. He received his PhD in Sociology at the University of Delaware, Newark, DE, and has published in the areas of economic development, entrepreneurship and organizations. salbould@udel.edu

Sally Bould, Professor of Sociology, University of Delaware, Newark, Delaware

Sally Bould is professor of Sociology at the University of Delaware, Newark, DE. She has published in the areas of poverty, women in development, work and family and aging. Her most recent publications are on mother's work and child care in South Asia. She is currently working on issues of poverty in old age. She received her PhD from Bryn Mawr College, Bryn Mawr, PA. salbould@udel.edu

Jorge Capetillo-Ponce, Assistant Professor of Sociology, UMass Boston

Professor Capetillo's Research specializations include social theory, race and ethnic relations, media studies, Latino studies, US-Latin America relations, and U.S. media coverage of Islamic societies. His current research is focused on majority-minority identity politics in Massachusetts, U.S. mainstream media representations of Latinos and influences on US-Mexico relations, media and violence, and the influence of Georg Simmel on Octavio Paz's The Labyrinth of Solitude. His recent publications include Images of Mexico in the U.S. News Media (editor, 2000), and "The Vote on Bilingual Education and Latino identity Politics in Massachusetts" (2003). Jorge.capetillo@umb.edu

Agnes Czajka, Doctoral Student, Department of Sociology, York University, Toronto

Czajka is a Doctoral student at the Department of Sociology at York University in Toronto, Canada, and is a Fellow at the Citizenship Studies Media Lab. Czajka received her Master of Arts degree from the Institute of Political Economy at Carleton University in Ottawa, and her Bachelor of Arts from the Department of Political Studies at Queen's University in Kingston. Her research interests include: citizenship, discourses of exclusion and inclusion, the place of the refugee in international relations discourses, borders, and refugee camps. Through the study of long-term Palestinian refugee camps in Lebanon, Czajka's dissertation will attempt to understand how permanent refugees disrupt and complicate theoretical understandings of citizenship, sovereignty and territoriality, and how the tension between their permanent residence in a polity and their transient status engender novel forms of practicing citizenship and sovereignty. Czajka's M.A. thesis was titled, "Inclusive Exclusion: Rethinking American Prisoners and Prisons." czajka@yorku.ca

Leila Farsakh, Assistant Professor of Political Science, UMass Boston

Professor Farsakh is a Palestinian political scientist who undertook post-doctoral research fellow at the Center for Middle Eastern Studies at Harvard University between 2003-2004. She holds a PhD from the University of London (2002), and an MPhil from the University of Cambridge in the UK (1990). She has worked with a number of organizations including the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) in Paris (1993-1996) and the Palestine Economic Policy Research Institute in Ramallah (1998-1999). She has published various articles and studies on issues related to the Palestinian economy and the Oslo Process, international migration and regional integration. Her forthcoming book, Palestinian Labor Migration, published by RoutledgeCurzon Press, UK is expected to be out by 2005. In 2001 she won the Peace and Justice Award from the Cambridge Peace Commission, in Cambridge, Mass. leila.farsakh@umb.edu

Christopher Gauthier, Department of Sociology, University of Michigan

Chris Gauthier earned his bachelor's degree in Sociology from Trinity College in Hartford, Connecticut. He is currently a doctoral student in the Department of Sociology at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, and his research focuses on social conflict, race and culture, and theories of community service. cgauthie@umich.edu

Michal Ginach, Psy.D., The Institute for the Study of Violence, Boston Graduate School of Psycho-analysis

Dr. Ginach was born and raised in a Kibbutz in Israel. She completed her BA in Tel-Aviv University in Philosophy and Literature, and a Master's in Social Work from Yeshiva University, New York. Her doctorate was done in the Institute for the Study of Violence, Boston Graduate School of Psychoanalysis on the topic of Israeli collective unconscious. She presented on this topic at the Eastern Sociological Association in New York City in February, 2004, and at the 1st International Congress of Fundamental Psychopathology, in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, in September 2004. Ginach is a psychoanalyst in private practice in New York City. mginach@rcn.com

Panagiota Gounari, Assistant Professor, Applied Linguistics Graduate Program, UMass Boston

Professor Gounari is an Assistant Professor in the Applied Linguistics Graduate Program at UMass Boston. She holds a PhD in Cultural Studies in Education from Pennsylvania State University. Gounari specializes in bilingualism, multicultural education, literacy and technology in language education. Her primary areas of interest include language policy and linguistic hegemony, critical discourse analysis, language and the politics of difference, the role of language in social change and the construction of human agency and democratic spaces as well as its implications for critical pedagogy. She has co-authored The Hegemony of English with Donaldo Macedo and Bessie Dendrinos (Paradigm Press, 2003). She is also the co-author of Globalization of Racism (in press). panagiota.gounari@umb.edu

Pamela Irving Jackson, Director, Justice Studies Program, Professor of Sociology, Rhode Island College, Providence

Pamela Irving Jackson is professor of Sociology and Director of the Justice Studies Program at Rhode Island College. Her research has focused on issues of social control and minority status, resulting in articles published in major journals, and her book, Minority Group Threat, Crime and Policing: Social Context and Social Control. Professor Jackson's book was included by Choice in the short list of "Outstanding Academic Books" published in 1989. Malcolm Holms cited her book in the May, 2000 issue of Criminology to make his point that "it has become increasingly clear that the roots of police-minority hostility are deeply embedded into the social structure." In the 1990s Dr. Jackson turned her attention to testing the impact of minority threat on crime control in different political and cultural contexts. She received a Fulbright for the summer, 2002, German Studies Seminar, "International Migration and National Identity," and she was later invited to collaborate, as a visiting fellow, with researchers at the Center for European Integration Studies in Bonn. Professor Jackson served on the editorial board of the American Sociological Review and is currently a reviewer for Criminology. Her 1991 article in Justice Quarterly, "Crime, Youth Gangs and Urban Transition: The Social Dislocations of Postindustrial Economic Development," has been reprinted in three edited collections, including Ashgate Publishing's International Library of Criminology, Criminal Justice and Penology. In 1997 she received the American Society of Criminology's Mentor of the Year Award. Her research is closely related to her activities as a teacher in the areas of criminal justice, deviance, and social control. She was the 2000 recipient of the Paul Maixner Distinguished Teaching Award at Rhode Island College. In 2003 she received the Mary Tucker Thorp Professorship for Distinguished Research in Arts and Sciences. pjackson@ric.edu

Anil K. Jain, Ph.D., Social Scientist and Publisher, Munich, Germany

Dr. Jain is a social scientist with a strong affinity to (critical) theory and cultural studies. His recent fields of interest are the current transformation processes of (post-)industrial societies; modernization and globalization; information society; theory of space/time; post-modernism and post-structuralism; class, difference and ethnicity; sociology of value and social networks; metaphors and representation. anil_jain@gmx.net

Jemadari Kamara, Associate Professor of Africana Studies, UMass Boston

Dr. Kamara, Director of the Center for African, Caribbean and Community Development, and Senior Fellow at the Center for Democracy and Development, is a specialist in community planning. He has extensive living and working experience in Africa. He is a former Fulbright Professor at the Universite Nationale du Benin Contonou and former Dean of the College of Public and Community Service of UMass Boston. adjarra@yahoo.com

Mehmet Kucukozer, Doctoral Candidate in Sociology, CUNY-Graduate Center

Mehmet Kucukozer is a doctoral student of sociology at the City University of New York Graduate Center. His dissertation will deal with the processes of collective identity (trans)formation and Kurdish nationalism, 1925 to the present. mkucukozer@gc.cuny.edu

Winston Langley, Associate Provost for Academic Affairs

Professor Langley is also Professor of Political Science and international Relations at UMass Boston. His interests are in global order, and he specializes in public international law, with human rights as his specialty. He research interests also include alternative models of world order, and religion and politics. He teaches a wide variety of undergraduate and graduate courses including world politics and world order, international political economy, human rights and public policy, and images of world politics in film and literature. He has published widely in his field. Recent publications include a journal article "Nuclear Weapons and the International Court of Justice" in International Affairs, and two books, Women's Rights in the United States: A Documentary History, and Human Rights: The Major Global Instruments. Email address: winston.langley@umb.edu

Charles Lemert, Andrus Professor of Sociology at Wesleyan University, and Professor of Sociology at the Boston Graduate School of Psychoanalysis.

Professor Lemert is the author of some twenty-five books, many to be found in translation around the world. Most recently, his books include Durkheim's Ghosts (Cambridge University Press, 2005), Muhammad Ali (Polity Press, 2004), Dark Thoughts (Routledge, 2003), as well as the third-edition of his international best selling text, Social Theory (Westview/Perseus, 2004). Lemert has been elected chair of the Theory Section of the American Sociological Association, chair of several academic departments, dean of the Social Sciences at Wesleyan, and chair of the Board of Directors of several agencies and schools, most recently of Positive Solutions, Inc. in Connecticut. He has lectured world-wide at many institutions including Seoul National University and Kent, Harvard and Yale, Oxford and UCLA, Helsinki and Bristol, as well as Alberta and Calgary. He has recently been granted an honorary Doctor of Letters by the University of the West of England. clemert@wesleyan.edu

Jennifer McFarlane-Harris, Department of English and Women's Studies Program, University of Michigan

Jennifer McFarlane-Harris is a doctoral student in English and Women's Studies at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. She earned her bachelor's degree in English literature at the University of Redlands, Cali-

foria, and her research involves gender and theology in nineteenth-century devotional poetry and African-American spiritual autobiography. jfmcfarl@umich.edu

Neil McLaughlin, Associate Professor, Sociology, McMaster University and the Canadian Social Science and Humanities Research Council (SSHRC) “Globalization and Autonomy” Project

Neil McLaughlin teaches sociological theory at McMaster University in Hamilton Ontario. He has published in such journals as Sociological Theory, The Sociological Quarterly, Sociological Forum, Journal of the History of the Behavioral Sciences and Dissent. He is presently working on “Edward Said as a Global Public Intellectual” and “the Canadian professor as public intellectual.” nmclaugh@mcmaster.ca

Bruce Mazlish, Professor Emeritus of History, M.I.T.; Director, The New Global History Initiative; Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences

Professor Mazlish received his Ph.D. from Columbia University and is Professor Emeritus of History at M.I.T. He is a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and was awarded In 1986 the Toynbee Prize, an international award in social science. Mazlish's areas of interest and expertise are Western intellectual and cultural history, with a special nod to history of science and technology, the culture of capitalism, and history of the social sciences. He is also an authority in the interdisciplinary field of psychohistory as well as historical methodology; most recently he has spearheaded an effort to conceptualize global history (editing a volume by that name which appeared in 1993), and has led the effort to further conceptualize and institutionalize global history by means of international conferences and other related initiatives, including the NGH web site. His most recent publications are: Civilization and Its Contents (Stanford), The Global History Reader co-edited with A. Iriye (Routledge), Leviathans. Multinational Corporations and The New Global History (Cambridge U. Press) co-edited with A. Chandler, and two forthcoming articles, one for Current Sociology and another, “The Hijacking of Global Society,” for the new Journal of Civil Society. Mazlish is also the author of: The Uncertain Sciences, The Fourth Discontinuity, The Co-Evolution of Humans and Machines, and A New Science: The Breakdown of Connections and the Birth of Sociology. bmazlish@mit.edu

Atossa Movahedi, American University, Washington D.C.

Atossa Movahedi will be receiving her Masters Degree in International Politics from American University in Washington, D.C. in May 2005. Her focus is on Transnational Crime and Corruption/Human Rights. Her related field is Peace and Conflict Resolution and she plans on attending Law School in Fall 2005. atossam@hotmail.com

Siamak Movahedi, Professor and Chair, Department of Sociology, UMass Boston

Specializes in Social Psychology and Social Psychiatry, with a particular emphasis on the relationship between social structure and psychopathology, and on the sociocultural aspects of self-destructive behaviors. Publications include “Metalinguistic Analysis of Therapeutic Discourse” (1996), “Women in Multinational Corporations: Old Myths, New Constructions, and Some Deconstruction” (with Arlene Dallalgar, 1996), and “Utopian Pursuit of Death” (1999). Movahedi is the editor of The Discourse of Sociological Practice. siamak.movahedi@umb.edu

Roderick Parkes, Researcher, Centre for European Integration Studies (ZEI)

Parkes is currently visiting academic at the German Institute for International and Security Affairs (SWP) Berlin, working on the social integration of immigrants in Germany and the EU, EU relations with Overseas Countries and Territories. He is Researcher at the Centre for European Integration Studies (ZEI) Bonn, working on the integration of Muslims in Western Society, the development of the EU as a value-based Community, criminalisation of immigrants in Western Europe. Parks is also analyst at the Institute for Media Research (Medien Tenor) Bonn, working on media representations of the EU parliamentary elections. Parkes received a M.Phil from Cambridge University in European Studies. His specializations include: EU asylum and immigration policy. Roderick.Parkes@gmx.de

Khaldoun Samman, Assistant Professor of Sociology, Macalester College

Professor Samman completed his PhD at SUNY-Binghamton where he wrote a dissertation entitled "Cities of God and Nationalism." It deals with the tensions inherent in different types of "imagined communities," especially as they relate to transnational sacred sites like Jerusalem, Mecca, and Rome. His larger research project is a comparative/historical analysis of what he identifies as "Occidentalizing nationalisms." It will include a comparative study of Greece, Israel, and Turkey. His special fields of interest include world-systems analysis, sociology of religion, historical/comparative sociology, and social theory. His publications include: "The Limits of the Classical Comparative Method," Review: Journal of the Fernand Braudel Center, XXIV, 4 (2001: 533-73), Reprinted in a shortened version as "The Convergence of World-Historical Social Sciences: The Limits of the Classical Comparative Method," in The Modern/Colonial/Capitalist World-System in the Twentieth Century: Global Process, Anti-Systemic Movements, and the Geopolitics of Knowledge, edited by Ramon Grosfoguel et. al. (Westport, Conn.: Greenwood Press, 2002); "Towards a Non-Essentialist Pedagogy of 'Islam,'" The Discourse of Sociological Practice, vol. 6, Issue 2 (fall 2004); "The Social Origins of Universalistic Monotheism: A Comparative Analysis of Paul and Muhammad" (submitted to Sociology of Religion); "Assimilating to Power in Two Different World-Systems: An Analysis of Paul and Herzl" (submitted to the Journal of World-Systems Research); "Go West Young Turk: Personal Encounters with Kemalism" (submitted to Macalester International). samman@Macalester.edu

Solen Sanli, Doctoral Candidate in Sociology, New School University

Solen Sanli is a Ph.D. candidate in sociology at the New School for Social Research, New York, currently writing her dissertation on the effects of privately owned television channels on Turkish democracy. She earned an M.Sc. degree from the London School of Economics and Political Science in 2000. SanlS015@newschool.edu

Frank Scherer, Doctoral Candidate, Social/Political Thought Program, York University, Toronto

Scherer received his BA (1997) and MA (2000) in Anthropology from York University; His publications include "Sanfancon: Orientalism and Chineseness in Cuba" in P. Taylor Nation Dance (2000) Bloomington: Indiana University Press. Since 2000 he has been in the Social/Political Thought Program at York University, working on Orientalism and Classical Sociology: Marx, Freud, Weber; and Orientalism and Freudian Psychoanalysis. Since 2000 Scherer has been a teaching assistant in York's Sociology Department. fscherer@yorku.ca

Hormoz Shahdadi, Adjunct Faculty, Political Science Department, UMass Boston

Dr. Shahdadi is an Iranian born writer and political scientist. He has widely published in Iran and currently is associated with both departments of political science and sociology at UMass Boston. hormoz.shahdadi@umb.edu

Rajini Srikanth, Honors Program Director and Associate Professor of English, UMass Boston

Srikanth is the author of The World Next Door: South Asian American Literature and the Idea of America (2004) and coeditor of Contours of the Heart: South Asians Map North America (1996); A Part, Yet Apart: South Asians in Asian America (1998); Encounters: People of Asian Descent in the Americas (1999); Bold Words: A Century of Asian American Writing (2001); White Women in Racialized Spaces: Imaginative Transformation and Ethical Action. Her interests include American Literature (including Asian American literature and literature of the American South), diaspora studies, comparative race and ethnic studies, the pedagogy of literature, and interdisciplinary approaches to literature. rajini.srikanth@umb.edu

Mohammad H. (Behrooz) Tamdgidi, Assistant Professor, Sociology, UMass Boston

Tamdgidi teaches social theory at UMass Boston. His fields of theoretical specialization include self and society, world-historical sociology, sociology of knowledge, social movements, and utopias. Tamdgidi's research and teaching are framed by an interest in understanding how personal self-knowledges and world-historical social structures constitute one another. His continuing research on liberating social theory in self and world-historical contexts is pursued via critical comparative/integrative explorations of utopian, mystical, and scientific discourses and practices. Tamdgidi's publications include "Toward a Dialectical Conception of Imperiality: The Transitory (Heuristic) Nature of the Primacy of Analysis of Economies in World-Historical Social Science" (forthcoming, REVIEW: Journal of the Fernand Braudel Center), "Open The Antisystemic Movements: The Book, The Concept and The Reality" (2001, REVIEW: Journal of the Fernand Braudel Center), "Freire Meets Gurdjieff and Rumi: Toward the Pedagogy of the Oppressed and Oppressive Selves" (2004, The Discourse of Sociological Practice), and "Mysticism and Utopia: Toward the Sociology of Self-Knowledge and Human Architecture (A Study in Marx, Gurdjieff, and Mannheim)" (2002, PhD Dissertation). Tamdgidi is the founding editor of Human Architecture: Journal of the Sociology of Self-knowledge. mohammad.tamdgidi@umb.edu

Tony Van Der Meer, Adjunct Professor of Africana Studies, UMass Boston

Tony Menelik Van Der Meer is co-editor of the book State of the Race: Creating Our 21st Century: Where Do We Go From Here? published by Diaspora Press. He served as president of Black Political Task Force and the Boston Pan African Forum and is currently Program Director for the Cultural Café, a monthly alternative community cultural forum of art, film, music, poetry and dialogue. tony.vandermeer@umb.edu

Peter Van Do, Graduate Student, American Studies M.A. Graduate Program, UMass Boston

Van Do is a second-year master's graduate student of the American Studies Program at UMass-Boston. His primary research areas include the Vietnam War/South Vietnamese veteran experience, Vietnamese American immigration, and ancient to pre-modern history of Vietnam. Other intellectual interests follow the topic of race, class, gender, social citizenship, and psychological oppression. Publications include a forthcoming article: "Vietnamese American Youth" in Asian American History and Culture: An Encyclopedia, a University of Massachusetts in-class bibliography, "Gurlz N Guns: Popular and Firearm Culture in Contemporary America" (2004), and a journal article: "Between Two Cultures: Struggles of Vietnamese American Adolescence" A Review of Vietnamese Studies Journal (2002). Community activities include membership in the Vietnamese American Initiative for Development (Viet- AID) in Dorchester, MA, and the UMass-Boston American Studies Roundtable and Asian American Studies Program. Peter Van Do is currently working on his master's research on the study of U.S. resident South Vietnamese veterans on the reeducation camp experience. He plans to graduate from UMass-Boston in June 2005 and has applied to several History PhD programs to further pursue his studies of pre-modern Vietnam history. vando37@yahoo.com

Samuel Zalanga, Associate Professor, Sociology/Anthropology, Bethel University

Trained in Nigeria and the U.S., and recipient of MacArthur Scholar's Fellowship at the University of Minnesota, Zalanga has done sociological field work in Malaysia and Nigeria. Broad areas of research interest include Sociology of Development; Religion and Social Change; Social Inequality and Sociology of Work. Recent publications include "Indigenous Capitalists: The Development of Indigenous Investment Companies in Relation to Class, Ethnicity, and the State in Malaysia and Fiji" (with Erik Larson, 2004), "Teaching and Learning Social Theory to Advance Social Transformation: Some Insights, Implications, and Practical Suggestions from Paulo Freire," in The Discourse of Sociological Practice (2004). His "Islam and National Development: A Cross-cultural comparison of the Role of Religion in the Process of Economic Development and Cultural Change" in Geographies of Muslim Identities: Representations of Diaspora, Gender and Belonging, edited by Cara Aitchison, Peter Hopkins and Mei-Po Kwan, is forthcoming. He has the following papers under consideration for publication, "Religion and the Development Agenda: The Contradictory Roles of Pentecostal Christianity in Sub-Saharan Africa," and "Christianity and Human Rights: A Sociological Assessment of the 'Rise of the Religious Right in America' and its Impact on Human Rights Concerns in the United States and the Third World." szalanga@bethel.edu

Peter Zervakis, Dr. phil, Project Manager, Bertelsmann Foundation, Guetersloh, Germany

Since October 2004 Dr. Zervakis has been European Project Coordinator at the Bertelsmann Foundation, Gütersloh. During 1999-2004 he served as Senior Research Fellow at the Center for European Integration Studies, and lecturer in Political Science at the University of Bonn, Germany. Zervakis is a visiting professor at the University of Innsbruck, Austria, and Reader at the German Armed Forces Command and Staff College in Hamburg. His recent publications include: "Die Europäische Perspektive für das geteilte Zypern: Eine neue Chance zur Lösung des Zypern-Problems? (The European perspective for the divided Cyprus: A new chance to solve the Cyprus problem?)," in Zeitschrift für Politikwissenschaft 14 (2004)2, pp. 451-500; "Die politischen Systeme Zyperns (The political systems of Cyprus)," Wolfgang Ismayr, ed, Die politischen Systeme Osteuropas (The political systems of Eastern Europe), second edition, Opladen (Leske und Budrich) 2004, pp. 887-942. Peter.Zervakis@bertelsmann.de